Red, in dying, is one of the five simple or mother colours. Some reckon six kinds or calls of red, viz. scarlet red, crimson red, madder red, half-grain red, lively orange red, and scarlet of cochineal: but they may be all reduced to the three following, according to the three principal drugs which give the colours, viz. the kermes, cochineal, and madder.