The above collection of specimens of old Italian lace embroidery come to us in the form of two handsome quarto volumes, containing each 30 plates, accompanied with a fully explanatory text. Of the character of the specimens, we cannot say too much or praise. They have evidently been collected by one thoroughly conversant with the subject, and capable of appreciating the artistic quality of this most elegant form of women's handwork.

They form part of a series of similar "Pattern-Books of Women's Handwork," which are being issued from the same publishing house, and have been preceded by three collections in similar form of "Old German Lace Embroidery," which have received the highest praise of the German press. Not only are they works of taste in admirable set of patterns to copy, but as a means of art instruction, these works of art instruction, these works are not merely admired, but cordially commended them to their friends and readers. These collections are sold separately at the price 6 marks ($1.50 each, or ten copies for $15.00.)

When the quality of the work is considered.
