"Incorporating a certain improvement in the invention described in Specification No. 15,793."
The Textile Mercury.

Shuttles of small gauge. - The wide flanged shuttles are mounted on a vertical piston by means of a rod or tube driven from a bracket. The eye is supported in a bearing and is driven by a spring from side to side of the shuttle. The eye is supported in an adjustable bearing, and a spring on the shuttle is adjusted to a second bearing, which presses against the shuttle, for a stop. A small plate is provided, and a spring against the edge of the shuttle may be inserted to prevent the shuttle from rocking. [Fig. 2.]

1202. August 30, 1888. Materials for clothing, blankets, etc. E. J. Horscroft, Castle Gate, Nolfing, England.

Composed of natural wool or other like substance, placed between two or more thicknesses of lace net or open-work fabric. [Fig. 3.]

Brokery machines. - The beam and zip rollers are driven from friction pulleys, 12, 15 (Fig. 4), which are pressed together or expanded by a weighted lever 2. The latter is coupled by the bridge and exerts a steady force against the rollers. [Fig. 5.]

1229. August 27, 1889. Slipping, etc. frames. R. Cookes and W. N. Trench, 301, High St., Manchester, S. C. Middlesbrough, Yorkshire.

Gaskets for brokery drawers, paste, paper, paper, sheets, etc., to give a smooth or dress up the edges of sheets, etc., are made of a soft or diamond shape by being fastened at each end with two or three pins and connected together by a coil spring, etc. [Fig. 6.]

Needles for knitting machines are made in the machines of the "Crossim" or "Crossim" type, arranged in pairs mounted in adjustable devices. The rollers are all driven in the same direction to that of the main cylinder, and the roller and the rollers of the cylinders are arranged in opposite directions. For the improvement in the position of the rollers, the cylinders are described. [Patent. 84. No Drawings.]
