THE KIDDERMINSTER CARPET TRADE.

There is still an unaccounted business in this district among covered manufacturers and dealers. Several firms speak of being busy, whilst others, although busier than for some months past, still find their orders unsold and their workrooms full. There is difficulty in securing sufficient orders to keep their looms fairly at work. A large quantity of goods are now coming on hand and this is apt to create considerable consignments, which up to the present this month have not been exhausted. We shall therefore expect a marked increase when compared with February. During the past fortnight the trade has been visited by a number of buyers, usually preferring to lay on the spot rather than from the patterns carried by the firms’ representatives, and in many directions orders have been placed considerable beyond the capacity of the mills which have been shown. The general condition of the trade is looked upon as being fairly good, and there is no reason to think otherwise than that a good summer trade is in front.

There is no change in the tapestry branch; business continues limited, although perhaps up to the average. In the Axminster and rug machinery the business is well employed, and in several instances extreme pressure exists.

There is but little change to report in the condition of the worsted trade, the orders for some qualities being firm, but for others values are a shade easier. Transactions continue light, and the turnover is much below what it should be at this period. If, however, the worsted yarn trade is no more business, moving, but orders in the main are small. The unsatisfactory state of the worsted market continues to press on all the operations in this branch. Prices of spun yarns are pretty firmly adhered to, and spinners say they are too keen to enable them to make concessions.

Cotton yarns are firm, and stand at a high figure. As manufacturers prefer to take from hand to mouth rather than place new contracts at present rates, as they do not think they can be long maintained.
