

The introduction of electrical carriers has relieved textile workers from having to keep walking around the spindles.

